"This tour is both an artistic experiment and a cultural exchange project. My aim is to inspire other artists and strengthen the cultural ties between Copenhagen and the cities I visit - including Bocholt."

Al Jacobi embodies a distorted and fragmented self-reflection - like the shards of a broken bathroom mirror vibrating to the bass of an underground club. Through a diverse blend of poetry, electronic music and hip-hop, he gives a voice to those unspoken truths that we often ignore for the sake of convenience.

Al has already completed numerous international tours and collaborated with artists from all over the world. He is now planning a European tour for autumn 2026, during which he will perform 100 concerts in 100 days. In doing so, he works closely with local scenes and involves the audience in his entire creative process - with the aim of empowering other artists and prioritising collaboration over competition.

Furthermore, Al Jacobi is the only rapper in the world to perform with the "MiMU Gloves" - a wireless, gesture-based MIDI controller that allows him to control various musical parameters during his performances. Al Jacobi uses these gloves not only for musical control and voice manipulation, but also for audiovisual interaction with a captivated audience.

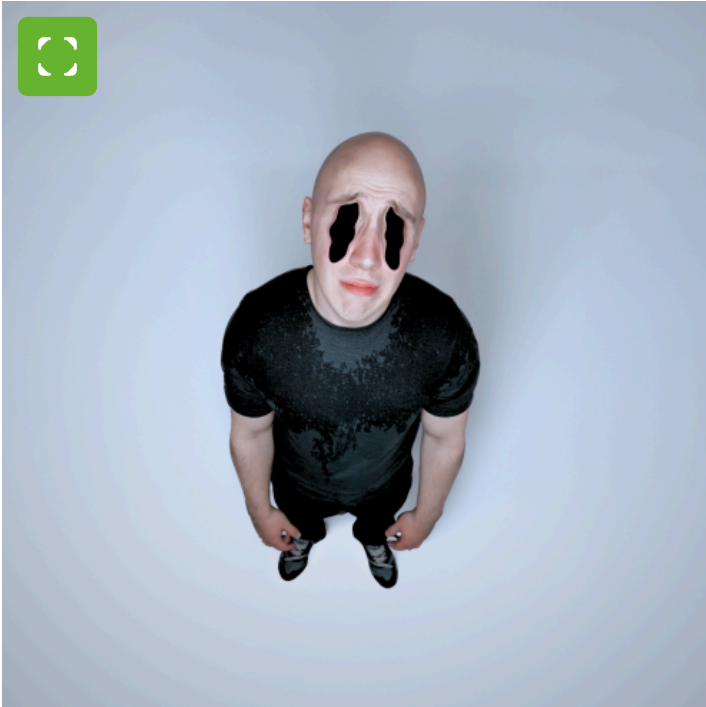

The '100 Concerts in 100 Days' project is supported by the Danish Music Council.
