Since 2012, the 'Küchenmeister' from the Ruhr region have been working their magic on the complex, ingenious and sometimes delightfully daft music of Frank Zappa. Their first concert took place in 2012, and the following year brought their big breakthrough: the Zappanale 2013! And now, 12 years and 50 concerts later, they're showing just what a proper Ruhr Valley kitchen can conjure up. With a brass section, marimba and vibraphone, as well as polyphonic vocals, The Dangerous Kitchen deliver an incredibly rousing live experience that delights more than just Zappa fans. In their tribute, they don't shy away from spicing up Zappa's pieces with their own creativity; they've recently developed a love for the theatrical, and current events in the land of the brave and the free provide plenty of inspiration for this... And "Die Küche" have it all in their repertoire. The nine musicians deliver everything Zappa has to offer, from rock tracks with mass appeal to the most intricate fusion avant-garde. On tour, the lads have a penchant for unusual venues and hidden gems on the German concert scene: a hairdressing salon, a deconsecrated church, a back courtyard in Gelsenkirchen-Ückendorf, a gig combined with a brewery tour... the crazier, the better. The Dangerous Kitchen" bring immense enthusiasm and a passion for stylistic detail to the table - with plenty of oomph!

What the concert-goers had to say:

A brilliant concert last night at the Lichtburg in Wetter. Without exception, all the musicians were top-class and in great spirits. I reckon Frank would have loved to have played with every one of you. (Joachim, Wetter)

Perfection in its purest form - they'd all have had a Mothers contract in the bag! (Heiko, Facebook)

Guys, treat yourselves to this - it's sensational! (Rüdiger, Facebook)

You were absolutely brilliant tonight! It was such a rousing concert; you were as close to the original as I've rarely heard here. Hats off to the performance and your hard work! The band was tight. Truly. (googlemeier)

Pure joy of playing! Every track was an experience! Even if you "only know that one song and went along for someone else's sake", you can't help but be swept up in the great atmosphere radiating from the stage! Absolutely brilliant - please keep it up! :) (Eva, Wetter)

"No, this wasn't just a mindless cover gig. The Dangerous Kitchen put their own stamp on the musical giant's vast body of work." (Marcus Römer, WAZ)
