

Volunteer fire brigade

An indispensable part of the defence

Volunteer firefighters are indispensable. They support the full-time firefighters in the fight against fires, emergencies and disasters.

Qualification according to the latest standards

In the Bocholt Fire and Rescue Academy, full-time and voluntary firefighters are trained according to the latest standards and prepared for their missions.

Advisory Board of the Bocholt Volunteer Fire Brigade

© Stadt Bocholt

In North Rhine-Westphalia, the volunteer fire brigade, with approximately 80,000 volunteer members, is a supporting pillar in the area of hazard prevention. This also applies to the Bocholt fire brigade, which maintains a volunteer fire brigade.

The increasing variety of tasks on the one hand and social changes on the other make the fulfilment of these compulsory tasks, especially in the voluntary sector, very demanding.

In order to actively deal with the various topics of the fire brigade, an advisory board was founded as an advisory body. The aim of the advisory board of the Bocholt fire brigade is to provide support in answering questions about the future. The advisory board also aims to promote social networking within the city of Bocholt.

Members of the advisory board are people from the economy, health care, science, schools, banks, business development and the city administration.

Join in?

Would you like to work in the volunteer fire brigade in a highly motivated and well-trained team with modern vehicles and equipment?

You are very welcome!

Give us a call: 02871/2103-102.