Tierra del Fuego, Chile, 1901: landowner José Menéndez plans to build a safe transport route to the Atlantic.

He hires three men with experience in the use of weapons to drive out the indigenous population and open up the route to the Atlantic. The men are extremely brutal and ruthless in their actions.

With the visually stunning landscapes, the driving musical accompaniment and the unsparing shots, the director takes the audience from the abyss to hell. He shows the cruel frenzy of barbarism.

The intensity of the film is heightened by the original Spanish soundtrack with subtitles.

Director: Felipe Gálvez Haberle
