Crows and ravens have accompanied and observed us since the beginning of human history. They have seen our first upright steps and heard our first articulated sounds. They have conquered new continents with us and experienced all our wars and battles. They celebrate weddings with us, feed on the remains of romantic picnics and wild parties and pick over our rubbish on the rubbish dumps of the big cities or as companions of the rubbish collectors. Crows and ravens follow us because we are the best hunters, the cruelest warriors, the greatest exploiters, the most rampant consumers. There is always enough to eat in our neighbourhood. There are ravens almost everywhere where people live. And there are more and more of them!
