This film portrays the life of a mother, with all the joy, doubts, love and anger. The mix of documentary and drama is based on the experiences of eight women, between 30 and 75, who talk about their lives and being mothers. Anke Engelke serves as a fictional projection figure who reports on the everyday life of a woman and mother. In anticipation of Mother's Day, this film offers the chance to go to the cinema with one's own mother, combined with the possibility of gaining new insights or recognising oneself as a mother.

Director: Carolin Schmitz (88 minutes)
