

Online lecture: Private pension provision for women

Anyone who wants to create a sufficient financial cushion for old age cannot avoid additional individual provision. The selection of suitable investment products is not easy, as the retirement provision options are - at least at first glance - difficult to understand.

Necessary - but also feasible?

Anyone who wants to create a sufficient financial cushion for old age cannot avoid additional individual provision. The selection of suitable investment products is not easy, as the retirement provision options are - at least at first glance - difficult to understand.

The lecture offers a general overview of the possibilities of additional private old-age provision - from safe bank savings plans to fund savings, e.g. with ETFs, to the question of whether insurance is suitable for old-age provision. You will receive practical assistance in selecting suitable product types. A spotlight is thrown on the Riester subsidy, which has become very controversial. For whom is it still worthwhile and how can existing contracts be dealt with?

The state-subsidised models of private old-age provision are presented in detail. These are:

- Gross salary conversion via employers and
- Rürup pension (basic pension).

Bocholt's Equal Opportunities Officer, Astrid Schupp, cordially invites all interested women to attend. The event is part of the series "Frau&Beruf" (Women & Work) organised by the municipal equal opportunities commissioners in the district of Borken.
