

Promotion of children, youth and families

In Bocholt, family friendliness is writ large. There are many interesting and supportive offers for families in the most diverse phases and situations of life.

It's here - the new youth development plan for the city of Bocholt!

Under the motto "Be there. Have your say. Strong together!", the city of Bocholt is setting out the strategic basis for the next five years with the Child and Youth Promotion Plan (KJFP) 2026-2030. The aim is to sustainably improve the living conditions of young people and strengthen their participation in urban society.

The plan serves as a binding basis for educational work and the distribution of funding. It was developed in a participatory manner - in other words, children, young people, experts and politicians worked together on the content.

The Bocholt Family Guide, which is published in cooperation with the Alliance for Families in Bocholt, provides information about the various contact points and addresses that have to do with the topic of "family". It includes offers from independent organisations, various institutions and the city of Bocholt. In addition to the presentation of local offers of help, supra-regional counselling institutions are also listed.

This is what it says:

- Counselling in general life, legal and educational issues
- Early help: Support before and after the birth
- Childcare options
- Counselling on parenting issues
- Financial support
- Leisure, recreation and health programmes
- School, further education and career development
