City of Bocholt is looking for committed persons for child day care

Information events for interested parties on Wednesday, 29 March, and Thursday, 27 April

The city of Bocholt is looking for committed people who are interested in working as a child day care worker. In two information events on Wednesday, 29 March, and Thursday, 27 April, the municipal youth welfare office will present the job and the necessary requirements and will be available to answer any questions.

"Those who enjoy working with children, can offer a family environment, are flexible, responsible and cooperative have good prerequisites," explains Doris Springer from the City of Bocholt. "Child day care offers an attractive way to combine family and work." The job can be done by the hour, all day and at weekends, with care for several children or just one.

The qualification for child day care is based on the guidelines for child day care developed by the German Youth Institute. The training can be completed while working.

The information events on child day care will take place on Wednesday, 29 March, and Thursday, 27 April, starting at 7 p.m. each day at the Volkshochschule Bocholt-Rhede-Isselburg. Participation is free of charge.

Registrations are accepted at vhv\(at\)mail.bocholt\(dot\)demail.bocholt(dot)de), Tel. 02871 2522-0 or in person at the Bocholt office or at the Rhede and Isselburg branches.
