"Bücher-Talk" - the new reading club in the city library

Open talk round about favourite books and current reading highlights // Tuesday, 28 February, 4-5 p.m., free admission // Register now.

New format: On Tuesday, 28 February 2023, the Bocholt Public Library will host the premiere of the "Book Talk". Starting at 4 p.m., all reading enthusiasts are cordially invited to talk about their common favourite topic of literature and tell what they like to read. Admission is free. Please register in advance at the public library.

"Talk about great stories and carry others away! Under this motto, the Bocholt municipal library will be offering a regular exchange round for all reading enthusiasts starting at the end of February," announces Melanie Tenhumberg, professional manager of the library. The first meeting will take place on 28 February from 4 to 5 p.m. in the municipal library. The experts of the municipal library await all those interested in the novel section with exciting book tips, but are of course also curious about recommendations from the participants. Tenhumberg: "Exchanging ideas, talking about literature or simply looking for inspiration for the next book - all this is possible and expressly encouraged in the book talk."

Participants can help shape the event

What is talked about is completely open: A book that has left an absolutely lasting impression? A favourite author that everyone should get to know? Or simply a current story that absolutely must be recommended to others? All those interested will have the opportunity this afternoon to tell other book lovers about their highlights. tell other book lovers about their highlights.

Registration at the public library and by e-mail

Registrations for the "Book Talk" will be accepted on site at the public library or by e-mail to stadtbibliothek\(at\)bocholt\(dot\)debocholt(dot)de). All those interested can name a book in advance that they would like to talk about or present.
