Topic: environmental protection and sustainability

Full of optimism, Carina Wohlleben, nature conservation and landscape ecologist and geographer, shows in her book how you can rediscover your love of nature and take up the fight against climate change. She talks about her life and the constant balancing act of reconciling environmental protection and everyday life.

The realisation that you can reduce your ecological footprint by 25 percent simply by not eating animal products prompted Wohlleben to adopt a vegan diet. Using many examples, she demonstrates how our personal decisions can have an impact on global problems such as factory farming, industrial agriculture and polluted oceans - and how everyone can help to ensure that the world remains liveable for our children.

100 years of Bocholt City Library

"Since libraries feel a strong connection to the topic of sustainability as a mediator of literature and the first point of contact for borrowing media, we are delighted that we have succeeded in including an author reading with Carina Wohlleben in our anniversary programme for the 100th birthday of the city library", says Melanie Tenhumberg, specialist director of the city library. "Her guidebooks make an important contribution to the topics of climate change and environmental protection. Participants in this reading will gain valuable impulses for their environmental and climate awareness."
