Trainees can win Interrail tickets

The state government's #AzubiGoEU competition enters its third round // Take part now until the deadline of 26 May // Supported by EUROPE DIRECT Bocholt

Apprentices in Bocholt have the chance to win Interrail tickets for travelling across Europe. EUROPE DIRECT Bocholt, which is supporting the state initiative locally under the title #AzubiGoEU, is drawing attention to this.

NRW Minister for Europe Nathanael Liminski has launched the third round of the #AzubiGoEU competition. Until 26 May 2024, trainees can answer quiz questions on the topic of Europe and enter the lottery pot for one of a total of 500 Interrail tickets. Further information at www.mbeim.nrw/azubigoeu.

The winners can choose between two ticket options: Either they will be travelling in Europe for up to one month and have unlimited rail travel on seven days within this period. Or they can travel for up to 15 days, in which case unlimited rail travel within Europe is possible every day.

Trainees who are between 18 and 27 years old at the time of application, attend a vocational school in North Rhine-Westphalia and are citizens of an EU country can take part. After receiving their ticket, participants have eleven months to set off on their journey. They are asked to share their favourite or most significant moments on Instagram using the hashtag #AzubiGoEU.
