"Being somewhere else for once" - that's probably what many children and young people wish for, who are fed up with school and bullied by their little brother. This is also the case for Josie and Marvin when they unexpectedly come across a strange cell phone that turns out to be a time machine. Now there is no stopping the three of them and they travel through time: from the Middle Ages to the future and back again. They quickly realize that although they can make new friends in the future, the future also holds some unpleasant things in store for them.

But suddenly they are "lost in a new time" and traveling back to our time is not so easy, because they fall into the clutches of an evil journeyman who only wants to use the power of time travel for himself. With fantastically beautiful music, author Gerhard A. Meyer takes the audience into an exciting world in which everything seems possible. Accordingly, it sounds diverse in this musical.

Musical group "on tour" for the first time

"We are going on tour for the first time with the children's musical group," musical director Stefanie Bergmann is pleased to say. An employee of the Ahauser city marketing had become attentive on the musical group and their performances some weeks ago in Bocholt and had inquired whether the group would not like to appear again in Ahaus. "Of course, we accepted enthusiastically," Bergmann reports. Almost the entire musical crew is on board despite the start of the summer vacations and the anticipation is huge, says Bergmann. So anyone who missed the performance in Bocholt or would like to see the play a second time now has the unique opportunity to experience the musical against a very special backdrop in the courtyard of Ahaus Castle.
