Music school: Additional dates for digital trial lessons on the subject of "early musical education"

February 4 at 3 pm - register now

Due to high demand, the Bocholt Music School is offering an additional date for the digital trial lessons "Early Music Education" on Friday, February 4, 2022, at 3 pm. Registrations are possible as of now.

On April 1, the new courses of early musical education begin in the premises of the Bocholt Music School, in the branch in Isselburg and also decentralized throughout the urban area in Bocholt. "Due to the high demand, the Bocholt Music School is offering another free taster session for "Early Musical Education" on February 4 at 3 pm. Due to the pandemic, the taster session for interested parents and children will take place digitally via the Zoom program," reports music school director Claudia Borgers.

The offer is aimed at children of kindergarten age who will ideally start school in 2024. The program sensitizes children to and with music in an age-appropriate way. Movement and dance, singing, speaking and elementary instrumental play promote the musicality of preschool children. The early music education program is designed to run for four semesters.

Registration for the free trial lesson is possible via the booking portal "Eveeno" under the link <https://eveeno.com/135927301> or via the website of the music school.

Registrations for early music education are already being accepted even without participation in the trial lessons. The registration forms and information on the fee structure can also be downloaded from the music school's website.
