Saturday at the bathing bay: Report suggestions and ideas for Bocholter Aasee

Public participation live on site on 24 September from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The popular local recreation area around Bocholt's Aasee lake is to be redesigned. What could it look like, what ideas do Bocholt's citizens have? The administration wants to know now. That's why a public consultation is being held next Saturday, 24 September, where suggestions and ideas can be submitted. The city administration will be live on site at the Otilie beach café on the bathing bay from 9 am to 3 pm to talk to people.

At the information point, there will be a large floor carpet with an aerial photograph of the Aasee, on which wishes and suggestions can be placed. "The Aasee is a favourite leisure and recreation area for many people in Bocholt. It is therefore important that the people of Bocholt have a say in the redesign of "their "lake. Anyone with ideas and suggestions is cordially invited to come along on Saturday", according to the city administration.

Online survey

At the same time, interested parties can take part online and submit suggestions. The survey can be accessed via www.bocholt.de and will run until 17 October.

Background to the Aasee re-planning

The aim of the Aasee re-planning is to further develop the Aasee as a local recreation area for citizens by drawing up a framework plan. According to the city of Bocholt, as many suggestions and wishes as possible from the participation will be incorporated into the concept.
