Telephone week: "Support in difficult times".

"Dementia Network Bocholt" offers telephone counselling for caring relatives of dementia patients from 16-20 October

The "Dementia Network Bocholt" runs a telephone counselling service from 16-20 October aimed at caring relatives of dementia patients.

Caring for a loved one at home can be one of the most challenging tasks that family members face. The physical and emotional strain that comes with this responsibility often leads to profound changes in the life of the carer.

In these difficult times, support is crucial, and this is exactly what the "Dementia Network Bocholt" offers during the telephone week from 16 to 20 October 2023. Relatives have the opportunity to share their concerns and challenges, whether it is organising care, dealing with dementia or balancing family, work and caregiving commitments.

Telephone Week is an offer created specifically for family caregivers: It offers callers an opportunity to exchange ideas and relieve stress, and to receive information about further support services locally, according to the organisers.

Anonymous and confidential

What makes this initiative particularly valuable is the anonymity and confidentiality of the counselling. Relatives can talk about their feelings and challenges without shyness. They do not have to make an appointment or leave the house, but simply pick up the phone.

The members of the "Dementia Network Bocholt" will be available every day during the entire telephone week to offer their support.
