Training

Trainees start at the City of Bocholt

Four young trainees have now started their training at the City of Bocholt. They were warmly welcomed by First Councillor Thomas and the training management under Eva Telahr and Stefanie Wilken. "We are pleased that you have decided to join the public service at the Bocholt municipal administration. The city is an important and efficient service provider for our citizens in many respects," said Waschki.

A willingness to perform and a high level of motivation on the part of the employees are basic prerequisites for a modern, efficient administration. "Show these virtues in your training and you will be successful," Waschki told the trainees at the start of their careers.

The municipal trainees starting on 1 August include Florian Döing (IT specialist for system integration), Pia Hustedde (draughtswoman for civil engineering and road construction), Cedric Keiten-Schmitz (IT specialist for system integration) and Lars Roßmüller (geomatics technician).

A career with the city

The city administration of Bocholt, with about 1,000 employees, offers many occupational fields and opportunities for career development. Information about training and studying at the municipality is available to interested parties at www.bocholt.de/ausbildung .
